TWO CENTS

GOOD ROADS MEETING TO BE HELD THURSDAY EVENING

Different Phases of Bond Issue to Be Discussed By Speakers

TO SHOW VIEWS OF GOOD ROADS

The meeting to be held Thursday evening in the hall of the Charleroi Savings and Trust Company building is an open one, and all citizens of the community are invited to attend. This meeting which will be convened at 7:30 o'clock, will be under the auspices of the Charleroi Business Men's Association and is for the purpose of discussing the good roads question and to consider the merits of the proposed bond issue.

The association will meet at 6 o'clock at the Hotel Wilbur, at which time Harry R. Campbell of the commissioners' office and John L. Stewart of the Washington Observer, as well as other visitors from Washington will be present. The visitors will take dinner with the association, after which adjournment will be taken to the hall, where some interesting phases of road construction and road building will be presented by Mr. Campbell by means of stereopticon views. He will also explain the merits of the bond issue and the probable cost in carrying the million dollar issue which is now proposed.

Mr. Stewart as well as the other visitors will also have some interesting information to give, and Mr. Schafer, president of the local association, urges every citizen that so arrange to be present.

The election to pass upon the bond issue will take place within two weeks, and it is the desire of the promoters of the bond issue plan to have every citizen well informed on the merits of the proposition. Washington county has a great deal to gain by a favorable action on the issue, and for this reason the Business Men's Association is making every effort to have a representative audience present.

EXPECT TO PLAY GAME ON SATURDAY

Manager Arch Osborne expects to have the local ball park put in good shape during the present week, and on Saturday, if the weather is favorable, will present his rejuvenated team which will be opposed by the J. Sullivan's of Pittsburg. Manager Osborne would have had the Aluminums here on Saturday last had the grounds been in condition to have played a game on them, but the carnival left them in such shape that it was impossible to book the contest.

BEACH MAY OPEN EARLY NEXT WEEK

John B. Schafer, who is very busy now in looking after the improvements to the bathing beach, says that he hopes to have everything in shape for the public not later than early next week. It was hoped to have had everything in readiness by Saturday, but the amount of work necessary to make the improvements proposed has been greater than expected and consequently it may be that the opening will have to be delayed for a few days. The swings were placed in position today, and other features will be installed as rapidly as possible. Securing additional equipment will depend upon the finances, but if Mr. Schafer is given sufficient encouragement the beach will be made more attractive than ever.

FINISHING TILE WORK ON BOROUGH BUILDING

H. W. & W. L. McKinley, contractors, of Monongahela, began work this morning to complete the tile work on the borough building. The vestibule of the new building has been holding up other work on the building because of its incomplete state. This condition has been due to the fact that the contractors were unable to get material, but now that they have the supplies on hand their part of the work will now be completed without delay.

BATHING BEACH TO GET BENEFIT

"The World at Home," a carnival attraction is booked to appear in Charleroi beginning next Monday, the 9th inst. A generous portion of the receipts of this attraction will be devoted to the bathing beach, which is now fitting up its attractions for the summer. Many improvements are being made at the beach and if a sufficient amount of revenue is realized from the carnival, quite a number of new features will be added. The beach already presents a different appearance, the grounds being improved, while the bath houses and stand will be whitewashed and painted, while a portion of the ground has been fenced off for children's playground. With a continuation of the warm weather the beach will be the most attractive and most popular spot in Charleroi.

Report Shows a Slight Increase in Local Shipments

NO NEW STEAMERS LAST MONTH

Only for the shipments made by the Carnegie Steel Company the coal traffic for the month of May through lock four would have fallen far short of previous months. Exact figures show a total shipment of 20,788,000 bushels, while for April the figures were 20,079,000, an increase for May of 709,000 bushels.

Lockmaster James A. Sweeney's traffic report is as follows:—Down—Lockings 379, steamers 228, boats and barges 1,220, rafts 1, other crafts 17, bushels of coal 20,788,000, lumber 6,000 cubic feet, lumber 3,000 board measure, merchandise six tons, passengers 25.

Going up—Lockings 274, steamers 228, boats and barges 1,217, rafts 4, other crafts 16, steel rafts 2 tons, lumber 51,200, passengers 30.

A peculiar feature of the report is the fact that no coke, sand or gravel were shipped during the month. As to coke it is realized that the by-product plants are fast crowding out the bee-hive coke, many of the Fayette county mines which heretofore supplied fuel for the ovens in the Connellsville region, having been turned to the river and the product sent to Clairton. The lack of sand and gravel shipments at this time would indicate that concrete work in the upper river reaches is not very pressing at this time.

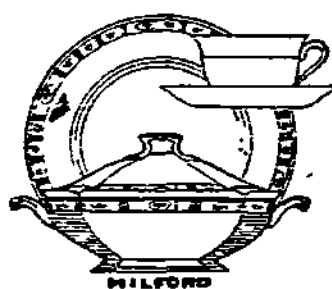

No new steamers were reported during the month, but it is expected that the Carnegie fleet will be augmented within the next few weeks with four all-steel steamers.

MRS. E. C. NIVER IS REAPPOINTED

Governor Sproul on Monday reappointed Mrs. E. C. Niver to be a member of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors of Moving Pictures for a term of three years to be computed from May 18, 1919. Mrs. Niver received her original appointment from Governor J. K. Tener and was continued under the administration of Governor Brumbaugh. She now receives her third appointment from Governor Sproul.

Capt. W. B. Whigham, vice president of the Carnegie Steel Company, accompanied by his wife and daughter Jane, made a trip up the Monongahela river on the steamer W. H. Clingerman on Sunday, going as far as the sixth pool, and returning on Monday. The Clingerman has been re-entered in the trade, after being repainted and otherwise being overhauled.

AT LAST, A TARIFF FLOP

The weather vane has swung once more. In 1912 Woodrow Wilson ran for President upon a platform of the open declaration of which was:

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the Federal Government under the Constitution has no right or power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue."

On May 20, 1919, Wilson's view of the power of the Federal Government, under the Constitution, had changed, for he said in his message to Congress:

"There are parts of our tariff system which need prompt attention. The experiences of the war have made it plain that in some cases too great reliance on foreign supply is dangerous, and that in determining certain parts of our tariff policy domestic considerations must be borne in mind which are political as well as economic."

Woodrow Wilson more than at times to learn what Republican campaigners were telling the country in 1912 and had been telling for years before. From the "fundamental" principle that Congress has no constitutional right or power to impose import duties for any other purpose than revenue, he has made the acknowledgment that "political and economic" considerations may also shape our policies. He now wants tariff laws that will constitute a "weapon of retaliation."

Thus President Wilson agrees with Republicans that tariff laws may have other purposes than revenue, and having made that concession, there is no limit to the purposes such laws may have. But he is not in agreement with Republicans, yet, as to the other purposes which should govern. He wants tariff laws as weapons of retaliation. Republicans want them as developers of American industry. The President wants tariffs which are to be used only against nations that discriminate against us. Republicans want tariffs that protect the American producer against every nation that produces cheaper than we, whether those other nations are discriminating against us or not.

The Republican policy is a constructive, affirmative, permanent programme of development. The new Wilson policy is one of using the tariff merely as a weapon in trade controversies where in the judgment of the administration, there may be discrimination.

But having progressed in his economic education to the point where he acknowledges that revenue is not the sole constitutional justification for a tariff, it may be hoped that in the course of time Mr. Wilson will come the rest of the way and agree, after his life-long fight against protection, that he was wrong and the men "with pigmy minds" who had not had "a new idea in thirty years" and whose "heads were chiefly useful as knots to keep their bodies from unraveling" were really right.

DUTY OF CONGRESS

Congress has certain obligations under the constitution in directing the foreign affairs of the nation. A treaty must be ratified by a two-thirds vote in the Senate, and its provisions may require legislation in both houses. These limitations do not exist in the British government where the prime minister need not lay a treaty before the House of Commons unless he wishes. The reason for the difference is obvious. In England the prime minister may be removed at any time by an address in the Commons. Therefore, he is under control of the people's representatives at all times while the treaty is being negotiated. In the United States Congress has no control over the President. Therefore, in order to make sure that the executive should not commit the government unwisely to a foreign policy, the makers of the constitution provided that no treaty should be made binding without the advice and consent of the Senate. President Wilson has not chosen to regard Congress as his adviser regarding the peace treaty. It is none the less the duty of the Senate to assert its constitutional power and insist by resolution on a separation of the treaty from the covenant for the league of nations.

NOT YET READY

The Albany (N. Y.) Journal says it appears the commission of Filipinos which was sent to this country to urge the granting of independence to the Filipinos wants a great deal more than self-government. They want the United States to release the Philippine Islands from the supervision under which their government now is, and then to assure them of protection in case they should be threatened with aggression from any source. They want a protectorate without allegiance to the protecting power. This demand is good evidence that the Filipinos are not yet fit for self-government. A nation intelligently comprehending the duties and responsibilities as well as the rights and privileges of self-government would not make such demand.

Soldiers and their friends are waiting with interest to see what will be the result of the overturning of the management of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. That bureau was months behind in its work until Col. Henry D. Lindsley was placed in charge. It is the general understanding that Lindsley brought the work more nearly up to date. His differences with the Secretary of the Treasury and his consequent resignation aroused soldiers. The controversy will undoubtedly end in an official investigation which will disclose whether Lindsley was in fact an efficient director of the bureau and whether the most recent change is for the good of the service.

The Germans say the Versailles treaty is a song of hate. Well, they didn't expect the concert of nations to lead off with a love dirge, did they?

No man can be a good American and engage in propaganda in the United States in behalf of any foreign nation.

A fool is one who goes through life with his eyes open, but sees not the things his eyes were intended to see. Instead of passing to one side of trouble, he bumps into it, runs headlong into brambles and gets stuck in mire. And sometimes he walks right into the arms of fortune or happens to be Johnny on the spot when favors are being distributed. But his streaks of luck are so thin as compared with the thickness of his worries and disappointments that they seem to be hardly worth considering.

Beautiful Yellowstone Lake.

The Yellowstone lake is a beautiful sheet of water nesting in the mountains nearly 8,000 feet above the sea. Its waters flow northward, forming the Yellowstone river, a tributary of the Snake. To many persons the falls and canyon of this river are the most wonderful of the park. Soon after leaving the lake the stream narrows and quickens, and the water leaps 100 feet directly downward. A short distance farther it tumbles 305 feet, or almost twice the height of Niagara. The river then runs between steep walls, which rise 1,000 feet above it. This canyon is somewhat winding, with numerous bold cliffs jutting far out into the abyss; and from these cliffs grand views may be obtained. Far below one sees the silvery stream, too distant to be heard as it dashes along. Across the chasm, a half mile away, dark green pines fringe the bank, and between the water and these woods are gorgeously colored rock walls, having all the tints of the rainbow.

The Penguin Tribe.

Birdologists have been arguing for years over the little penguin that is to be found round the coasts of Australia and Tasmania. Some authorities who are not authorities contended that there were two species, the "little penguin" and the "fairly penguin." Others who thought they knew better said that there was only one species. The argument appears to be drawing to a close. After the murder of many of the "visebills" (I've been bitten by them), the taking of innumerable measurements and even a report by a well-known doctor on their blood-heat, the decision appears to be that the penguin tribe is in the midst of a transitional period, and that probably in years to come two distinct clans will be discernible. At present, in any rate, they can be classed as one.

Bird of Peculiar Name.

All the way from Australia comes the brown kingfisher, or the so-called laughing jackass. He is called that because of the song he sings. The only reason it is called a song is because he is a bird, and all birds are supposed to have songs; but whatever it is that is called a song is something that sounds like a hee-hawing mule. In his native haunts this peculiar bird subsists largely on live fish, but in captivity, unless small fresh fish are easily obtainable, he takes readily to a meat diet. If a fish, mouse or sparrow is given to him he will take it in his strong bill and hammer it continuously against his perch or the wire until it is almost a pulp. This practice aids digestion.

Honor Noted Missionary.

Among the relics preserved on the island of Tahiti is the burial place of the Rev. Henry Nott, one of the first, and considered the greatest, of the missionaries who went to the South seas in the early days. Says the Detroit News. The mission sent out from England to Tahiti in 1796 was the first undertaken by the London Missionary society after its formation. Henry Nott was of the company who landed from the ship Duff, commanded by Capt. James Wilson at Matavai bay, Tahiti, in 1797. From that time until his death in 1844 he labored without ceasing to the island. It was he who first translated the Scriptures directly from the original Hebrew and Greek texts into the Tahitian language.

Coxey's March to Washington.

There were 122 in Coxey's army when it reached Washington, May 1, 1894, although "General" Jacob S. Coxey, formerly a shoemaker at Massillon, Ohio, had announced that he would lead an "army of 100,000 unemployed people" there. He had planned to petition congress to issue $500,000,000 in noninterest-bearing bonds, the proceeds to be used for the improvement of roads throughout the country, thus giving employment to many persons. Coxey and Carl Browne, a follower, were imprisoned twenty days in Washington for persisting in an attempt to make a speech from the capitol steps.

Royal Family Names.

Members of the royal families have no surname—that is, no family name such as ordinary people are known by. There is a good deal of discussion on the subject and Mr. Cockayne, an authority, says that the prevailing idea that the family name of the house of Hanover, to which Queen Victoria belonged, was Goephe, may be dismissed as absurd, that having been the Christian name of a medieval duke of Bavaria, whose sister in 1040 married the marquis of Este, and it is from this couple that the house of Hanover descended. Hence d'Este comes nearest to being the maiden name of Queen Victoria.

What a purifier of things in general is the miracle of the frost! How keen and fresh is the air! There is an exhilaration in it that none of the disadvantages can possibly take away. And the purity of the air is of such a nature as to kill the various foul microbes that infest the human system, and would work our ruin. All are now coming to know how beneficial to those suffering from tuberculosis is such air as this, so frost has its ministers of blessing as well as of injury. It is one of those cases where just enough is good and too much is very bad.

Irresistible Sand.

One of the most interesting and remarkable of the many regions for the observation of sand dunes lies between Bordeaux and Bayonne, in Gascony. The sea here throws every year upon the beach, along a line of 100 miles in length, some 5,000,000 cubic yards of sand. The prevailing westerly winds continue picking up the surface particles from the westward slope, where they are again deposited, and the entire ridge by this means alone moves gradually inward. In the course of years there has thus been formed a complex system of dunes, all approximately parallel with the coast and with one another and of all altitudes up to 250 feet. These are marching steadily inward at a rate of from three to six feet a year, whole villages having sometimes been torn down to prevent burial, and rebuilt at a distance.

Miss Flora McFlimsey.

"Flora McFlimsey of Madison square" deserves a place in the women's hall of fame, despite the fact that she is only a fictitious person. She is the subject of a poem which was first published in Harper's Weekly 62 years ago. Within a year it had been published in practically every paper in America, Canada and England. The verses about the young lady who had "nothing to wear" were published anonymously, the author, William Allen Butler, a prominent New York lawyer, fearing that to be known as a versifier might hurt his legal reputation. Scores of impostors claimed the authorship of the lines, but, as none of them could show publication previous to that in Harper's Weekly Mr. Butler's right to live in literary history as the creator of "Flora McFlimsey" is secure.

Convicts' Shrewd Trick.

There are some queer plots hatched in prison even lately. In a French prison there were two men of the same name, one in for a long time and the other for a short term. They concocted a plan, while taking exercise, by which they both got free. The fact is they managed to mix themselves, and the result was that the long-term man was told one morning, long before he was entitled to freedom, that he could go. He went with alacrity. Very shortly the other man's time was really up, and when the day of release was passed he complained to the authorities, who at once inquired into his case and found that they had released the wrong man. They could do no other than let him go.

We Don't Do It Now.

Mrs. Deacon Philander, who had been in bed a week suffering from a nervous breakdown due to overwork in cleaning her house, suddenly rose up in bed and screamed: "I must get up! Let me up!" She was restrained by force. She sobbed and said: "There is some dust on the mantel behind the clock and it has been there a week. I meant to clean it up, but forgot it until this moment." If the physicians can find an anti-housework toxin they offer hopes that Mrs. Philander will eventually recover some of her former health. Mr. Philander has made arrangements to have her guarded night and day to keep her from committing suicide by useless housework.

Dreamers Get Nowhere.

The Creator has been more lavish with the bestowal of genius than he is credited with. Most folks "have it in them" but they never get it out. "They have all the marks of genius and we look to them for great things, but they turn out to be only moldy prospects. Instead of letting the thrill of greatness spur to action they dream of success, and while they are dreaming someone else wins the honor. The trouble is they were not truly great; they were only almost great. An almoster can never keep a level head in high station. Man must be to the manor born to fill the position with dignity and worth."

Raphael.

The modern form of the name of Raphael, one of the greatest painters of the renaissance, is Raffaello, and his family name Santi is also written. Sanzio. According to some writers, he was born March 29, 1483, while others give that date as one day earlier, while still another group contend that the inscription on his tomb, which is April 6, is the correct day of his nativity. Should this be so a most remarkable coincidence appears in the fact that he is said to have been born on Good Friday and died April 6, 1520, which also fell on Good Friday.

A lady who lived alone had taken into her service a young girl from the country. One day both mistress and maid were going out, and in such circumstances it was usual for the key of the back door to be hidden in the garden. The hiding place had been pointed out to the girl, and when she went out she was careful to secrete the key in the place indicated, but she pinned on the door a piece of paper on which she had written, "Shall be back soon. Key under the flower-pot on the window ledge!"

Bliss Supreme.

"We should strive to make a heaven here on this earth," said the serious citizen. "It can be done, with a little luck," replied Cactus Joe. "Yesterday I held a straight flush against four aces."

USE OF MORPHINE

"Troubled about 16 years with what the doctors called gall stones, often I thought I would die before the doctor could get here, when he would give me a hypodermic of morphine and advise an operation. A neighbor told me about May's Wonderful Remedy for stomach trouble, and since taking the first dose 2 years ago I have not had an attack nor needed a hypodermic." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Looking at Truck Tires from the Ground Up

A worm's eye view of a Solid Rubber Truck Tire sustaining a load of a thousand pounds or more, rolling over average roadways would show more distortion and distortion of the rubber than the average truck owner thinks possible.

In a great measure, all rubber looks and acts alike until you bend, pull and flex it out of shape, and what happens then is just this:

New, vibrant, properly toughened rubber will "come back" return to its normal shape; heavily loaded, lumpy, inert rubber won't. Result—a lumpy condition in tires that invites undue wear and tear.

The even wear of GOODRICH DE LUXE SOLID RUBBER TRUCK TIRES is proverbial. They rarely, if ever show any tendency to nick, chip off or disintegrate generally.

LEARNING TO BE A CIVILIAN

Discharged British Soldier Testifies That He Finds New Feeling Out of Uniform.

Is the glamor of uniform wearing off?

After three years of service clothes I have just spent my first days in civilian attire. Surprising to tell, I believe I have met with more civility out of uniform than in it. "R. G." writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.

Two possible solutions of this remarkable attitude occur to me. The first is that most officers appear to be rather stern and stand-offish in uniform. The other solution, and perhaps an equally probable one, is that the public is getting tired of seeing so many officers going about aimlessly with apparently nothing much to do except to spend money and kill time.

Naturally, I suppose, when I first went out in "civvies" I had the ingrained inclination to salute all superior officers I met and to prepare to take salutes from the ranks. It took me the best part of a day to overcome this impulse.

The "sir" habit was very strong, too. On my first morning as a civilian I had to see a colonel at the war office on business—business in which our standing was at least equal—and I immediately "sirred" him, of course. Force of habit, pure and simple.

Again there is the matter of running after an omnibus or across the road—in uniform one tries to make a point of not doing these things. Now, however, when "example" has not longer to be considered, I find it practically impossible to chase an omnibus or flee from an oncoming taxicab. The instinct is against doing so.

Apparently it is just as necessary to relearn how to be a civilian as it once was to learn how to be a soldier.

SKILLFUL PIECE OF WORK

Novel Feat of Engineering Recently Put to the Credit of American Bridge Builders.

Not long ago it was discovered that the piers of the combined highway and railroad bridge across the Missouri river at St. Joseph, Mo., were in bad condition and it would be necessary to build new piers. At first it was proposed to build the new piers on the downstream side of the old bridge and shift the bridge laterally to the new position. In this way maintaining traffic over the old bridge while the new construction was going on. But the war department required the installation of a larger draw-span in the bridge and so it was decided to build the new piers between the old piers. After they were completed, the fixed spans of the bridge were moved shoreward endwise, so that they rested on the new piers. A temporary span was constructed to fill the gap thus occasioned, so that traffic was closed over the bridge for less than ten hours. Then work was begun upon the new swing span, which was built as a cantilever in open position. To permit of this, a portion of the old swing-span had to be cut away and a temporary lift-span was put in to take care of river traffic. Thus the bridge was reconstructed without changing its alignment.—Scientific American.

Our Book of Doom.

A doomsday book of a new sort has been produced by the alien property custodian. It approximates 500 pages and sets out the names of the enemy concerns that have been found in the United States. The custodian thinks his efforts have been without real cost to the country, since he brought to light for the treasury to collect more than $600,000 in income taxes which were being evaded. Besides the custodian turned some of the German concerns to war work and had them produce $30,000,000 worth of supplies.

The custodian's new book, says National's Business, contains a deal of comfort for Americans who have claims against Germany and who have been wondering if they will have to wait for payment until Germany makes up her mind about the variety of government she likes best. The state department has hinted that American claimants may get immediate reimbursement from the funds the custodian has collected.

Hubby's Blunder.

He resided in the suburbs, and when he accidentally met an old friend in the city who persuaded him to remain in town for the evening he went to the telegraph office and wired his wife as follows:

"Missed the 5:30 train. Don't keep dinner waiting. Shall be home late."

It was very late when he did arrive home, and his wife met him at the door.

"Did you get my message?" he said, beaming down at her.

"Yes," she said, very quietly, "but I would like you to explain why you sent a message at 4:28, telling me you had missed the 5:30 train."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Mrs. Kennedy-Fraser, who has done so much to create interest in Hebridean songs, took a phonograph to the islands, says a writer in Daily Chronicle. This was in order to secure the absolute accuracy of the weird music which is traditional in the Hebrides. The people were so excited by the novelty of singing into the phonograph that they could hardly wait for the record to be played, and then they were amazed at the fidelity with which it rendered the songs and all the trivial sounds of onlookers.

MAKE USE OF PRINTER'S INK

Federal Official Urges Necessity of Campaign of Advertising to Attract Attention of Consumers.

"Advertise your business. I owe all my success to printer's ink."

This was the language of P. T. Barnum, and that he was a conspicuous success is generally admitted.

Something of the same sort seems to have struck Washington. Roger W. Babson, director of education service, labor department, has issued a statement urging a campaign of advertising, saying in part: "Prosperity ultimately depends upon the consumer. If there is not a market for goods they will not be produced. Only by advertising can buying power be stimulated, but advertising does stimulate buying power and brings a very direct return to the man who advertises."

It is sound advice. It is also timely.

Advertising is the chief auxiliary in trade. It is not the road to success, but success itself. Advertising is to the business man what machinery is to the mechanic.

How can a man know what you want unless you ask for it, or what you have to sell unless you advertise it?

"My advice to the merchant," says Mr. Babson, "is this: For your own interest and for the good of the country, increase the advertising appropriation you have made for this year. If it is $20,000, make it $25,000; make it more if you can."

And all must bear in mind that the prosperity of the country means the prosperity of the individual.—New York Telegram.

FORCED TO FINE DOG HERO

But New York Justice Took Into Consideration Animal's Brave Deed in the Past.

Two medals bestowed for bravery hung from the collar of Jim, a Great Dane, when he appeared in the West side court the other day, charged with having been unmuzzled in public, says the New York World.

Patrolman Joseph B. Ward, attached to the health department, said he had seen Jim in a car without a muzzle. Jim would not let the policeman come near when an attempt to serve the summons was made, Ward testified.

Harry Gilpin, a druggist, told the magistrate about Jim's heroism. Mr. Gilpin and his daughter were asleep in their house one night in 1918, when a fire started. Jim was running up and down outside when the firemen arrived. He failed to make the firemen or the crowd understand what the trouble was. So he darted into the smoke and fire and dragged out first Mr. Gilpin and then Miss Gilpin, both overcome.

For this Jim received the Spiers medal that year and Miss Gilpin gave him another. Recently the Alps club of Riverdale honored him.

"A dog that is as brave as you are deserves consideration," Magistrate Nolan said, "but you weren't muzzled and you resisted the officer. Fine $1."

Jim carried the bill in his mouth to the clerk of the court and took the receipt back to Mr. Gilpin.

Submarine Signals.

During the war, as is well known, submarine sound-signaling made great strides. In Schiffbau an account is given of a device employed in Germany. In this device the receiver is secured to the outer layer of the ship's hull from inside and is filled with water, the liquid being in contact with the outer plating of the vessel. The essential point in this device appears to be that the means for producing the sound are placed externally on the wall of the liquid tank, whereas in most cases the sounding device has hitherto been arranged inside the tank or receiver. Another special feature is an automatic arrangement for maintaining constant, or adjusting, the level of the water, which can be manipulated externally.—Scientific American.

Wrong Kind of Clothes.

Little tragedies occur to the men who have to chronicle the larger ones. On Thursday evening our "special correspondent" (arrayed in a silk hat and the best morning costume) arrived, to find his mission meant the late train to Whitehaven and a plunge into a burning mine.

He telephoned at once for the proper clothes, but the message must have miscarried in the ear of the careful maid, who packed up a valise of dress clothes and shirts for the man who was to go down the mine.—London Chronicle.

The young man about town had just been accepted by "the one girl in the world," who, nevertheless, was a member of a forty-strong beauty chorus.

"So you think you love her?" smiled his father.

"I know I love her!" swore the infatuated youth.

"Are you sure you love her as much as you think you do?"

"I'm sure of more than that. I love her as much as she thinks I do!"

Making Success.

Make today successful. Bend your energies toward accomplishing something within the next 24 hours which you can think of with satisfaction when you put your head on your pillow at night. Enough successful days make a life success, and there is no other way of doing it.—Girl's Companion.

ARE ICE CREAM CONES TAXABLE?

Does the internal revenue law provide for a tax on ice cream cones, when the same are carried away from the place of purchase? This is a question that has been disturbing a number of those who make a specialty of selling soft drinks and ice cream.

The law provides that where ice cream sundae or similar confections are sold for consumption in or in proximity to the place of sale a tax shall be collected from the purchaser. It is further contended, however, that ice cream sold in a container and which is intended for consumption in the home is not subject to an internal revenue tax. This phase of the law is said to cover ice cream cones, which have always been sold at five cents each, but which, since the application of the internal revenue law, been sold at six cents, five cents for the cone and one cent internal revenue tax.

Some dealers contend that the law does not specify the character of the container, hence ice cream cones bought and carried away from the place of sale are not subject to the tax. This means, if these dealers are right, that cones should not cost more than five cents, and that dealers who are adding the one cent revenue tax have no warrant of law for so doing.

However, the dealers are not to be blamed, as they were not furnished with copies of the law, and had to take what information they secured from extracts as published in the newspapers. The revenue law with reference to taxes on soft drinks and ice cream confections, as well as other articles heretofore not taxed, is a long one and requires very careful study on the part of the dealer to avoid violating any of its provisions. They have therefore taken the precaution to add the one cent revenue tax to cones to be on the safe side, although there are some local dealers who have made no such charge.

PREPARING TO CONSTRUCT NEW ROAD

The contractor who is to rebuild the stretch of roadway between Donora and Monongahela has a steam shovel
at work near the old Shoenberger mine, where he is preparing his "camp," which will be his center of operations while at work on his highway. A number of frame buildings have already been erected, which will be used as storage and bunk houses, and the real work of construction is expected to begin in a very short time. It is anticipated that the roadway will be closed to auto and team traffic while construction is under way.

CARNIVAL EMPLOYEES ARE HELD FOR COURT

The seven colored employees of the Brown & Dyer carnival company, which appeared in Monongahela last week, and who were arrested Saturday night last on a charge of larceny, were given a hearing before Alderman Elwood on Monday morning, when he held them in $1,000 bail for their appearance at the next term of criminal court. As they were unable to furnish the bond they were committed to jail to await trial.

SHERIFF APPOINTS HIS SON AS A DEPUTY

Lieutenant Harold F. Wickerham, son of Sheriff Frank B. Wickerham, has been sworn in as a deputy sheriff and has assumed his new duties. Lieut. Wickerham returned from overseas service three weeks ago with the One Hundred and Tenth Infantry, with which he served during the world war. He originally enlisted in Company A of Monongahela in the old Tenth two years ago, and went into service as a private, being promoted while abroad and receiving the rank of First Lieutenant before coming home. Before entering the army he had done clerical work in the sheriff's office.

CONNECTING LINE IN ALL-RIVER DRIVE

The new piece of highway which Allegheny county is now building and which will connect the improved highway at Elkhorn with the east end of the river bridge at Monongahela, is being pushed with great speed at the present time. The last piece of retaining wall is now under way, forms for holding the concrete having been placed in position. With this short stretch of wall completed the work of 1-
the concrete surface on the roadway will begin, the contractor expecting to start on this final phase of the work on Monday next. As the roadway is all graded, and only a small amount of dirt to be removed because of slips from the hillside, the laying of the concrete is expected to be pushed with great speed. Once the road is completed which should be some time this summer, it will furnish the missing link which will give a continuous driveway to Pittsburgh along the river.

BOOZE BANNED IN WESTMORELAND

Judge A. D. McConnell, president judge of Westmoreland county, announced Monday morning that he and Judge Daniel J. Snyder met Saturday afternoon and refused all applications for license to sell liquor in Westmoreland county. He stated that the following was written on each application:

"And now, May 31, after due consideration of the within application for license, it is refused for the reason of the disagreement of the two judges who presided at the license hearings."

The decision of the two judges was sent to the Supreme Court in Philadelphia on Monday morning. The attorneys for the "wet" forces have been missing since last Tuesday. It is not known what action they will take.
